with the force of a bullet. She and the something fell backward onto the porch in a whoops.

"Hi-ya! Another one of my relations come to visit me. Hi-ya! Wahoo!"

the strong little arms which clutched her.

"You oughta be ashamed of yourself.

Pa" [illegible] "Cicero, you [illegible] that I'm [illegible] a [illegible] and I'll [illegible]"

"Oh, my [illegible]"

[illegible] "Where's your [illegible]"

[illegible] "Oh dear [illegible]" and [illegible] school with Cicero.

The next morning, when [illegible] calmly waiting for her at the [illegible] He was dressed in [illegible] round face was [illegible] He was smiling [illegible] like a small, pink [illegible]

"I'm ready." Cicero [illegible] announcing [illegible] you gonna take me [illegible] promise to be good, Cicero."

"I promise," Cicero agreed quickly. "Come on or we'll be late."

[illegible] marched quietly at Petunia's side [illegible] Porky Pig.

"[illegible] Cicero, but Pierre was a [illegible] Porky asked with a friendly smile. "[illegible] Pierre?"

"Pierre," Petunia called. "You're not [illegible] Porky, that way. Don't [illegible] Porky. He's too [illegible]."

"Oh, that's all right, P Petunia," Porky said as the three walked on down the street.

"Pierre is a all right. P Porky's a g-good fellow, even if he has a t-can't t-talk s-straight," little Cicero explained.

Suddenly Cicero shrank back in fear as he [illegible] the huge dog in front of [illegible] Dog, named Cicero, [illegible] and fell in the dirt.

[illegible]

[illegible] and ran away from the angry Petunia.

"[illegible]," Petunia [illegible] to [illegible] Porky replied [illegible]

"[illegible] a [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

[illegible] tricks on me, young fella. If you do, I'll fix you."

"I won't, Biggs," Cicero said [illegible]

They walked along [illegible] for a few minutes. Suddenly Cicero looked up at Biggs and there was an impish gleam in his bright eyes.

"You're awful smart, aren't you, Biggs?" he asked [illegible]

"Yup," Biggs said with [illegible]

"You can do just about anything, can't you?" Cicero continued.

"Sure. What's on your mind, small fry?"

"I'll bet you can't walk on the top of that fence from here to the corner without falling off," Cicero replied, pointing to a long wooden fence beside the walk. On the other side of the fence was a [illegible] flower bed filled with black [illegible] earth. A wooden gate was set in the fence a few feet from the corner.

"I bet I can," Biggs replied. "That's easy!"

"Let's see you do it, then," Cicero insisted.

With a grin Biggs leaped on the top of the fence and started walking forward, balancing himself easily on the flat top rail.

Cicero darted ahead and leaned against the gate. Softly his fingers lifted the latch. Then he waited for Biggs to reach him, his eye resting on the outlined gate. His eyes glittered as he pictured Biggs [illegible] into the bush and when the gate was [illegible] pushed inward.

Suddenly Biggs walked toward the gate, coming [illegible] on the fence top.

The moment [illegible] Biggs's foot was [illegible] on the gate top, Cicero's fist pushed the gate inward.

The Biggs's foot went on the gate, the round Biggs leaped lightly down to the solid walk.

The hinges of the gate were oiled and Cicero pushed hard. His foot moved forward with the gate and Cicero moved, too. His body was balanced. His plump little body propelled forward. Then he plunged with a jump into the muddy flower bed.

"I told you not to try any tricks on me," Biggs shouted, as the [illegible] bedraggled form Cicero scrambled out of the flower bed. "I was warning you all the time."

"Now you'll have to go home and get clean clothes and you can't go to school because Mother and everybody [illegible] you were a loser, Cicero Biggs!"

Cicero couldn't answer. His mouth was full of mud

CRAZY!

I've heard that Sniffles often cries;
At least folks think he does:
And Porky and Bugs Bunny said,
"Why don't you be like us!

"We never cry; we're happy;
We smile, and we are glad;
So try to smile at something,
So you will not look sad.

"Be happy for the sunshine,
And for each bird that sings;
Be happy for the flowers,
And other lovely things."

They tried to act so funny;
Made funny faces, too;
And Sniffles said, "You are the best,
Of friends I ever knew."

They gave him many presents,
Like fruit, and kinds of cheese;
They offered him some goodies,
And said, "Come sample these."

They grew a little worried;
No matter how they tried,
The tears continued to roll down
While Sniffles cried and cried.

Then Porky called his playmates,
And wished they'd help him out;
He said, "See Sniffles crying!
But what's it all about?"

"We'll ask him," said Petunia,
"For surely if we knew,
The reason he is crying,
There'd be something we could do."

"I think you have a good idea,"
Said Porky, "Yes, I'll try."
And so he said to Sniffles,
"Whatever makes you cry?"

"Oh goodness me," said Sniffles,
"I'm not so sad," said he;
"I'm crying 'cause I'm HAPPY;
You're all so good to me."
